him.-Philadelphia Ledger. PADEREWSKI, THE PIANIST.

In the Opinions of Some He Is Greatest Since Rubenstein.

IGNACE J. PADEREWSKI. "A male Bernhardt-all nerves and art." That is the way Ignace J. Paderewski, the Polish planist, was described by an Eng-ish critic. The advent of this red haired, blue eved Pole into the musical world of England and America has caused a veritable sensation this year. Critics and public alike have raved over his achievements, some even going so far as to pronounce him a successor to Rubenstein. This estimate of his ability has been questioned by many, a pianist of remarkable skill and power.

HALLOW FILL & GORDON, ATTORNEYS AT LAW,
Tooms on Well and We, Sedgwick Block, Telephone No. 11. He was born in Podoria, Poland, Clirtyone years ago. As soon as he was able to reach the keyboard of a piano he began to play, and guined some local reputation as an infant prodigy. As he grew older he turned his attention principally to com-position, and achieved a really notable name for so young a man. He studied un-der Leschetitzky, the husband of the famous Mme. Essifoff, and played at a concert or two. His work was so enthusiastically received that he gave up composi-tion for the life of a piano virtuoso. Since he began his concert tour of the great tities of the world each new appearance has been a new triumph.

His earliest real successes as a virtuoso the Lamoureux orchestra and at the Conservatoire. By no means the least notable feature of his work is the extent of his repertory, which includes pretty nearly all the great purpoforte classics as well as many productions of composers little known on this sale of the water.

Famous Company.

THOUSANDS OF FINE COSTUMES.

An Average of Seven Hundred for Each Play in the Repertory-Solid Silver Candelabra Twelve Feet High Used on

A company of players organized and trained by a nobleman, and presenting dramas with a magnificence ne approached on this side of the Atlantic, is now in America. These actors and actresses formed, until a short time ago, the court company of the Duke of Saxe Meiningen, and are known as the Meiningers. They have long been world famous in a way-that is, stories of the princely extravagance of outlay which accompanied their performances have for years floated around among the newspapers. But these stories were accepted more as interesting romances than as fact, and the Meininger company was by many people looked upon as a myth. Its appearance in New York has proved conclusively its existence, and the eyes of the doubters have seen for them selves that it in many respects justifies all the tales told by the European correspondents. It is the culmination of the most remarkable fad the world ever saw. George II, duke of Saxe-Meiningen, is sixty seven years old. Since his childhood he has been a lover of the drama, and since 1866 he has devoted practically his entire time and a large portion of his magnificent fortune to the direction of performances at his court theater in Meiningen.

FRAULEIN HAVERLAND,

The one object he has constantly kept in view has been the perfection of scenic and spectacular effects. He has carried this idea to an extreme never dreamed of by

For the Teutons and Cymbri are dresses of skins and barbaric decorations of strings of animals carved from wood, teeth and brass trinkets. armor of the Roman soldiers is made from the old Roman designs and is battered and tarnished as if just from the battlefield. Pompey's statue, at the foot of which Cæsar dies, is a splendid work of art eight-een feet high and modeled by a famous German sculptor.

For the play of "Mary Stewart" two solid silver candelabra are provided, each twelve feet high. They can $14,000. The costumes are magnificent, those of Queen Elizabeth and her contributes being valued at $3,000 each. For this play, too, there are over 700 costumes, many of them being of the richest plush, silk and satin, embellished with jewels and heavy ornaments of An idea of the care exercised in the performances, may be gathered from the fact that in mob and martial scenes where "supers" are employed, the natrained men are divided into groups of three, each of which is placed in charge of a man thor oughly instructed in the work required of and those under him. These leaders of the supers were all brought from Ger-
